Dear Parents,

When we look back at our own early years, the memories that stand out most vividly are often tied to simple, everyday experiences. These small moments, which might have seemed insignificant at the time, become our most cherished memories and form the fabric of our lives.

In the vibrant world of kindergarten, we understand how a kind word of encouragement, a supportive hand during new activities, or even a simple smile in the morning can significantly influence a child's confidence, joy and eagerness to learn. This holds true at home as well, where the little things you do together often become your children's most treasured memories.

Your involvement in your child's education-whether it's helping with homework, participating in school events or simply spending quality time together-greatly impacts their overall development. Every bedtime story, family meal, or playful interaction contributes to your child's sense of security, joy and growth. These small, yet meaningful experiences lay the foundation for their future and make their childhood truly special.

Together, let us help our children build a lifetime of wonderful memories.

Warm regards,
Ms Sajani Susan Philip
